IMPRISONMENT

The defendant is committed to the custody of the United States Bureau of Prisons to be imprisoned for a total term of 27 years (224 months) .

180 months as to Count 1 of Superseding Indictment 1:07CR2238-001JB; 240 months as to Count 3 of Superseding Indictment 1:07CR2238-001; and 240 months as to Count 1 of Indictment 1:08CR3048-001JB; said terms shall run concurrently.

7 years as to Count 4 of Superseding Indictment 1:07CR2238-001JB; said term shall run consecutively.

Under rule 11(c)(1)(C) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, the Court accepts the plea agreement, which includes a specific sentence of 27 years imprisonment, as the Court is satisfied that the agreed sentence varies for justifiable reasons.

Defendant Matthew Clayton Lloyd's offense level is 29 and his criminal history is category VI. His advisory guidelines sentence range is 151 to 188 months. The Court has considered the guideline range established for the applicable category of offense committed by the applicable category of defendant. The Court has also taken into consideration other sentencing goals. Specifically, the Court has considered the factors set forth in 18 U.S.C. § 3553(a)(1)-(7). In doing so the Court has arrived at a sentence that totals twenty-seven years: For Count 1 of the superseding indictment in Criminal Number 07-CR-2238 JB, the Court imposes a sentence of 180 months. For Count 3 of the superseding indictment in Criminal Number 07-CR-2238 JB, the Court imposes a sentence of 240 months. On Count 1 of the indictment in Criminal Number 08-CR-3048 JB, the Court imposes a sentence of 240 months. These sentences will run concurrently. On Count 4 of the superseding indictment in Criminal Number 07-CR-2238 JB, the Court imposes a sentence of seven years, which will run consecutively.

The Court believes that this sentence, which varies upward from the guidelines imprisonment range, reflects the seriousness of the offense that Lloyd has committed and will promote respect for the law, provide just punishment, and afford adequate deterrence. While the sentence varies from the suggested range under the Sentencing Guidelines, it is a more reasonable sentence and more faithfully promotes the sentencing goals Congress laid down in 18 U.S.C. § 3553(a).

Lloyd committed several crimes, including car jacking and two counts of armed bank robbery. When he carried out these crimes, he brandished and discharged a firearm. Moreover, considering the totality of the circumstances, and the ranges of sentences that the guidelines establish in this case, the Court notes, and Lloyd's counsel has acknowledged, that the United States could have brought more charges than they did. The rule 11(c)(1)(C) plea agreement reflects the understanding that the United States is not bringing all of the charges it could have brought against Lloyd.

In other cases, the Court has varied downward to reflect the weakness of the United States' case against a defendant. The Court therefore believes it is appropriate to consider that the United States has a strong case against Lloyd on several counts. The strength of the United States' case weighs in favor of an upward variance.

The sentence that the Court imposes also reflects the seriousness of the offenses and promotes respect for the law. It is fair to say that Lloyd was on a crime spree. Lloyd's actions put the public in considerable danger. The sentence is therefore appropriate to impress upon him the harm that he brought about and the serious nature of the crimes he committed.

Furthermore, the sentence reflects adequate deterrence and, at the same time, just punishment. Lloyd will be a much older man when he is released from prison. Because he will be older, the Court believes his chance of recidivism will be reduced. He will also be specifically deterred, because he will be incarcerated for an extended period of time. A longer sentence will also generally deter others from committing similar crimes. Finally, because of some of the conditions of release that the Court will impose, Lloyd will be able to receive some of the counseling and care he needs to successfully integrate back into society. In sum, the sentence the Court imposes varies upward from the guidelines, but in these circumstances, such a sentence more effectively promotes the goals outlined in 18 U.S.C. § 3553(a).
